

first update - 6/7/22

June 7, 2022

idk what to say here but i'm starting a blog today i went to work and took some pictures my toe is broken (no pictures) been watching the simpsons writers block and boredom u know, the usual
this is me being proactive i deactivated my instagram account don't ask me why but if u know u know deleted all my tweets

in search of a NEW LIFE (tentative album name) only like 2 songs are done-ish and i'm not that motivated to work on the rest i don't think the world needs another musician, my ego isn't big enough working on another documentary if u read this tell me i owe u a snickers bar, i want to incentive people to visit my site the pavlovian way anyways thank you

WOW 500 VISITORS!

(actually 498 but i assume it will hit that shortly.)

about 2 people visit infelicities.com every day don't you want to be special?

that's one way to do it.

12 trucks came to visit me from NH, amidst a road trip from there to colorado we went bowling and i got him to try some cheese curds, he showed me this new beverage called disaronno overall it was a good time we started a new song too, hoping to release album in august still.
name is still not final but the album cover is def staying the same idk if i mentioned where it came from but it was literally a piece of trash i found on the ground

all i did was crop it to make the cover, that was how i found it it spoke to me for some reason, it was the same day i met tunnel bob in early april

anyways that's all, i gotta go to work all dripped out for the wedding today sh*t gonna go crazy about the album...

i planned to release it like 2 days ago but it's not finished. i still plan to finish it, still work on it a little bit every day, adding songs, forgetting about others, the usual process but more meticulous, which has been the trend across all my projects.

i visit NH a few weeks ago, made some new songs that i would like to put on the album, but also want to make a collab album, give my tracks to the collab album because i want to move in a different direction, just overall uncertainty surrounding the project. i've shown a few people a few of the tracks and they seemed to like it but i always think it could be better...

anyways last night i was working on one of the songs (grow up) and i wanted to go through a bunch of my old tracks to polish them, because that's what a lot of this project has been. hooks recycled from random voice memos i made 2 years ago, which i think are good but i've gotten so damn picky about how it sounds. i used to be like "ok as long as they can hear it it's good" but now i want it to sound all studio quality and improve which is inherently good but i wish i didn't give as much of a shit sometimes i got off track but during that process i went to this one track called "florida" that i made when i had covid january 2021, and afterwards nothing would open. i'm going to the project files of all my songs crossing my fingers that they open and it just stalls at the loading screen. i went to update the app and i guess because i was mooching off my brother's copy through the family sharing plan i can't update it...

anyways i want to make music so bad rn but i can't and that's why i'm writing this. still not sure of the album name but "Dreck Draff" is what I call it atm.

Tracklist:

1. Chokehold (unfinished, Umaga ref.) - Londonderry in August (2:50)
2. Try Harder (feat. 12 Trucks, recorded lyrics but not satisfied yet) Madison in July (2:32)
3. Rollin Round L Town (feat. YF Yance, Alp, DJ Donnely unfinished) Londonderry in August (1:54)
4. Rocket Ship (feat. YF Yance) - finished Madison June, (2:41)
5. Blump - 90% finished not satisfied yet Madison April (2:44)
6. Grow Up - recorded lyrics not satisfied, changed beat up yesterday Madison April (3:30)
7. Ballin - FINISHED I POSTED IT ON THIS WEBSITE ONCE (3:25) July 2020-2022
8. Affirmation - recorded lyrics not satisfied Madison May (2:08)

9. Winter Break - recorded lyrics not satisfied Londonderry December 2021

(3:12)

10. Music - mostly finished Madison July (1:43)

11. Lexus Freestyle (Bonus Track) (Already Released, not on streaming)

So like a 29 minute long runtime, which isn't bad but I strive for at least 30, make this my longest album yet. feels like forever even though I made 2.5 other projects this year, so yeah that's the state. album cover still the same. Ballin has been meant for all of my albums since Feedback, I started it before I was done with Music for the Mental. Winter Break was meant for Transparency, but the rest were made for this album. Lots of tracks are definitely scrapped but could still see the light. I don't know why I rush to release things so much, the pressure helps me work harder but I feel like there is a bigger standard that I should live up to within my music.

September 25, 2022

time flies, i can't believe it's been nearly a MONTH since my last post. i made 2 videos, a couple new songs, and all is pretty good tbh.

in my lil ugly mane video i forgot to elaborate on dennis' eating phase. he basically eats all his food (which he has to pick up) and then rolls the dice to see if he gets a tummy ache. if the has a tummy ache it determines if the cop can use the guillotine or not. honestly you just gotta read the rules i can't explain everything. or maybe i can and i'm just making excuses. i felt like i did a good job describing it. maybe i'll make a more in depth video if the game gets popular.

i'm on my way to 100 subs on youtube and 1000 visitors on this website.

what's gonna hit first? i'm guessing youtube but it would be cool if they happened at the same time.

still planning on releasing album in october. im prolly chillin the rest of the day but i've been hard at work on it for months. getting faster at everything, i made a shit ton of songs but i will only release like 9.

anyways thats all for today. <3

November 26, 2022

back in nh. i released a new song today, embed code doesn't work but you can download the mp3 on this site!

the rest of the album is coming along well. still planning on releasing by the end of the year.

i hope we can all be friends someday i made the new song (winter) over the course of one weekend. most of it was in one day, until like 3 am. i want it playing in more youtube shorts. thats why you can download it here. use it. i implore you. i'm begging you please .

bro this kanye news lately is so sad, if he made better music nobody would care but he needs some action to back up these words. i hope he's doing some machiavelli shit where the ends define the means but whats ur plan bro. what is your endgame.

i love turkey

tracklist:

1. million years
2. music (tbd)
3. try harder
4. real (rocket ship)
5. all i need
6. grow up
7. i got it made/ice xreen
8. ballin
9. break

WOW 1000 VISITORS!

thank you everyone who came to infelicities.com!

i will be releasing my album on friday, if you're a true fan you can find it on one of my accounts. I see one of you already have (cough, a) anyways it finna be lit go check it out theres more & better on the horizon that i'm already working on

have a wonderful day infelicitors (infel fans)

January 15, 2023

overhauled the website today, changing icons, reformatting, making better, etc.

i had a decent weekend. got new tattoos on friday, saw the whale (7.5/10 i reccomend) watching through all of aronofskys movies (requiem for a dream blew my mind) yesterday i cleaned and organized everything (on my computers too), also started on a new song and that was just off my gumption, i needed nothing to persuade me, it was amazing i am grateful for days like this no timeframe for the next album yet, but i am (passively) working on it.

currently working on an s366 visual experience, including interactive projections, a live performance and swag it will be livestreamed from the comfort of my own home in like a month or so idk (i'll announce it when i know) my intention is to make something that i can send to venues so i get booked and live out my dreams

you DO NOT wanna miss this it'll be a doozy hmmm idk what else, but as my first post of the new year, i'd say we're off to a good start

if you took the time to read this, i love you <3

January 17, 2023

the lord is testing me

today was a shitty day to say the least went to get my car fixed and even though it still drives the repairs are worth more than the car is planning on selling it but i'm getting a second opinion and once again the insurance that's nearly $100 a month doesn't do shit to cover it geico lowkey a scam @umaga . nothing personal shadow the hedgehog is my favorite sonic character

then i get home and after feverishly researching how to make this more affordable i finally eat for the first time today then and started making a song i had like a half full (not half empty) cup of water and i knocked it over, it pooled all over my desk and got on my keyboard and speakers and my heart stopped. my fight or flight response kicked in and i wiped it off with a towel then turned it off now have it like pic related if i was holding my macbook in an active shooter situation i would turn around so the bullets hit me and not the mac. sometimes i feel like the only way people would appreciate my art is if i die too soon. and 80% of my art is on there. it's a fucked up thought but theres more where that came from god is testing me and i spent so much money this weekend on dumb shit all willy nilly, but you know what? it was the best weekend i've had in a long time.

everything is gonna be okay. my mac is gonna work. i'm gonna get better car. we all have shitty days but whatever butters said in that one south park episode with the goth kids i have everything backed up regardless so maybe that shooter analogy was a bit dramatic.

this blog is the only journaling i've done in over a year. i have a journal stashed somewhere that was unabashedly moody, i started it when i went to africa in 2020. i stopped when i got more consistent with therapy.

these blog entries are all positive because that's the face i want to project on the world, because no one likes a negative nancy. it's a good thing too i try to practice more gratefulness because i'm honestly very blessed and privileged. i feel happy and sad sometimes like everyone else but i have clinical depression and a shit load of anxiety, i'm so deep down that rabbit hole, i bite my fingernails, grind my teeth, and a whole lot more personal shit that i don't want to share for the world to hear. just listen to what i talk about in my music you'll get it

i put on family guy just gonna regress to being a kid worrying about losing pokemon games again (that was the first time i felt depressed)

i destroyed my first journal by ripping it up and burying it when i was like 15 or 16. looking back that shit was mid compared to what i'm going thru now.

crying over relationships that never happened. oh wait i do the same thing now but with someone i was with physically. it's the same thing. but either way i didn't want anyone reading it, which i still understand now. might track it down and reread it sometime soon getting tired thanks for reading this ramble if you made it all the way through send me a heart emoji and if you want to read my actual journal uncensored send me $10000 through paypal its on the homepage good night infelificfriends :)

keep smiling

what's up infelicitator solicitor mr. take his own picture (er) that last blog was a bit grim but my macbook is fine. it froze and shut down a couple times due to the cold (like -10F) but otherwise runs great :) been having car troubles, girl troubles, life struggles and light stubble, the usual for those that didn't know i plan on returning to new england this year there is just nothing for me in wisconsin like i posted on social media 🙄 about it and nobody from wisconsin asked why, but a bunch of people from new england did i miss u guys fr

this movie i was involved in recently was so lackluster i'm not saying what it's called but i was appalled and embarrassed at the state of it i didn't really do anything to save it, i should have. i had like an hour and could have done a lot.

but i honestly just wanted to see it how the creator intended, and i didn't like it. concept and intention were good, execution was poor i'm at a creative standstill, not really eating that much or working out either. i recognize this as depression shoutout to a and his movie "downbeat" very personal film for both of us i watched every second it good

i don't miss college

but it was definitely easier than it is now i didn't have to wake up every day it was so easy i finessed everything i could and i barely learned anything goodnight

February 6, 2023

i'm not okay

i know i tend to overthink things and let shit get to me but i feel so deep in the shit rn i'm drowning

i did nothing all weekend. i didn't even go to bed, i was on the couch. i tried sleeping in my bed last night but the couch was so much better just hours and hours in my little comfort zone, regressing to nothing got plans cancelled on me twice, at least i tried to do something social worked on no videos, no music, no art, nothing. i watched youtube shorts all weekend and slept every few hours.

and i kind of like that but i know it's not sustainable. if i didn't have work today i would do just that.

just standing up seems like it takes too much effort. i was laying down all weekend.

even playing a video game seems like too much effort. if i can't see the screen while laying in my crack of the couch then what's the point what's the point of anything. whenever i see a video of me rapping i cringe. then i feel like my music isn't good enough without it.

i don't know how to get back into the swing of that because i haven't even wanted to all year. i just feel burnt out on everything i hate how i look, i don't put on weight and if i do i lose it so easily. just from vaping for a month and a half i lost 10 pounds my mom sent me something and i feel like i don't deserve it. haven't even responded i know i said i was trying to spread positivity and i'm done with the sad posts but this just feels like a new low cried this morning to joji - glimpse of us because i relate a lot to that song i honestly want to end myself. and i used to feel this way all the time so it's nothing new for me but i went a while without it permeating every thought i'm sorry for all the friends i've failed, betrayed, or took for granted i want to be a better person but i hardly even try don't bother reaching out to me

March 1, 2023

i'm okay!

haven't updated this in like a month but i can get melodramatic sometimes decided to update the website today, going for a more minimalistic and straightforward approach.

as for life updates, there isn't much going on. i'm excited for spring, i love hearing the birds outside as the snow melts.

the s366 experience has been put on hold. there is work i did on it but i don't think the end result would be something me or other people would really enjoy i might use what i've made for something else in the future but yeah... otherwise pretty stagnant. got some gaming videos coming out this month though :)

not really working on music either, but i have at least a dozen tracks in the vault. mainly trying to figure out real life shit on top of isolating myself and working from reading my previous entries it's clear that i was deep in depression, which i still am, but i'm taking initiative and have gotten lots of those pain in the ass tasks out of the way as well as hitting the gym and taking in a caloric surplus once again. got a new haircut, this new look is gonna be sick once i'm jacked

reggie has been on steroid medication for the last month, and his asthma is healing wonderfully. it makes me so happy knowing that i'm helping him breathe better.

i've been indulging in comfort shows quite a bit lately, like trailer park boys and king of the hill. i got into both of them last year during a very vulnerable time in my life and have been rewatching them along with the other few i got in the rotation (family guy, simpsons, etc). maybe i should check out some new shows but they don't be hitting like the ones i formed a trauma bond with anyways guys i don't know what else to say here just that i'm doing better since my last blog and i appreciate all of you who check up on infelicities.com life has it's ups and downs and because i want to be transparent about my life i'll leave them up, even though i don't want to present myself as a debbie downer

thanks for reading and don't forget to boogie first of all, happy birthday reginald!

this is his xray

on this day, two years ago, i met reginald on one of the best days of my life he's happier and healthier than he ever was :') anyways you guys probably noticed that i changed a few things on this website again...

the blog isn't going to be front and center anymore. i like having a place to share my thoughts and opinions but i don't want that taking up as much space as my music or video stuff. i'm still working on that gaming video despite stalling it and i still think about my next album, the final s366 album (for real this time) you've probably figured this out already but you can access the blog through the date at the bottom of the screen or infelicities.com/blog now it's a "secret" blog which makes it so much cooler it's like a hidden code so eh that's about it hopefully these changes make the infelicitexperience more interesting til next time infelificfriends :)

2000 VISITORS!

also happy palindrome day!

things have been pretty good on my end, i'm working on music again still having troubles with real life but who doesn't?

you might have noticed on the ? (%3F) page i have some new art...

this is a concept for a new show i am working on called "Finge" it's about the 5 fingers and their day to day struggles in art school.

I'm trying to keep these things TV-PG but we'll see.

would you be interested in watching this? have any ideas? let me know!
shout out to baker b for visiting over the weekend and showing everyone a good time

1/4 through 2023 and things are looking brighter other than the music project i'm working on and finge i still have the gaming video

no idea if that's ever gonna come out i'm already kinda out of that phase anyways guys, thanks for reading and thanks again for 2000+ visitors. it's really an honor.

more coming soon!

2500 VISITORS! NEW EMAIL!

new car :)

haven't updated this blog in like a month but heres the rundown:

i got a new car, pictured here. it's pretty sweet, although i think i've already blown the speakers and i need the muffler welded. WELP.

no matter though because i like this car and don't mind spending money on it :)

i cracked my laptop screen and that's another huge-ass repair bill tis the essence of life, the more money i make the more i spend on shit i don't want to spend money on i'm using it for an album cover, that's pretty much gonna be the theme of this album.

right now the tentative name is "Vol. 366," i'm shooting for at least 10 tracks.

anyways guys feel free to shoot me an email at sean@infelocities.com or s366@infelocities.com

i paid for it so i'm gonna fuckin use it trapchat.us is no more. sorry nathaniel i'm not renewing it thanks all for coming to infelocities.com and there is much to look forward to in the year 2023

5/12/23

May 12, 2023

it's my birthday :)

my gf got me tears of the kingdom i'm so happy visiting some family tomorrow and vibes are up!

just felt like making a shitshow of an image this isn't art i'm just having fun art used to be just having fun but it's crazy that now i can trade my talents for cash like i might be a public school teacher guys i'm hyped!

either way whenever i'm feeling burnt out on art i gotta have some fun with it because that's why i started doing it in the first place still making music, making videos, mainly focusing on getting my shit right before i move to NH...

AT THE MOMENT i intend on previewing my album before i move. it's not done but i know my headspace might change when i move so the album could be a lot different. at the moment, it's my longest, but i usually start out that way then only 6-10 tracks make the cut. trying to get a bit more than that, and ultimately treating this album as a collection rather than just one vibe, because it isn't. i'm even considering splitting it into 2 albums, another one about NH mainly featuring another artists and this jungle/jazz thing i got going on with the other joint. i'd only be previewing the solo joint and some of the tracks from the other one.

anyways guys thanks for reading and DON'T FORGET TO SUBSCRIBE my gf is the only person who subscribed and i love her for that click on the scrolling "infelicities" text to sub i'm not gonna spam your inbox dw have a fantastic infelicious day back home, things are alright unemployed at the moment but i have something lined up i released a movie, won't provide a link but if you know me you can find it i also made a secret video only available on this site embarrassing stuff imo

hope u enjoy

miss my gf

love u all

August 22, 2023

i wish there was a more cordial way to end things every goodbye is difficult, although some easier than others i'm not talking about the easy goodbyes though. when something is just not working, and no matter how much you love it, you feel it is best to let go.
i've come at this crossroads several times in the past year, and it always sucks

cars, pets, apartments, and more and once again i pray i've made the right decision.

for those who don't know, don't worry, the website will not change.

but i will.

yeah ik corny but seriously always forgive, never betray love

10/22/23

October 22, 2023

i'm holding up on my end i haven't been updating this website as of late because i have nothing to update it with.

i've still been taking pictures, making music, videos, etc. but none of them feel worth posting (yet) if you're my friend we've definitely talked about the dichotomy between quality & quantity.

as an obsessive compulsive perfectionist i work on mevery craft every day, and even if it's something small it's better than wasting away i'm pretty sure will smith said something like that. i feel bad for what people have been saying about him. he's always been one of my favorite actors. i hope he can find love just like the rest of us.

something is coming soon. i have been working on it for months. scrapped a bunch of videos but they will still see the light someday.

there are 2 albums: nightwalker (my album) and avg joes (collab with princeyy) nightwalker is mostly finished but idk what will come first (i wanna make it better)

hopefully by the end of the year but if not then early next year nightwalker

1. nightwalker suite (name tbd) feat. nebula
2. oh man feat. kerry
3. problemz
4. why he sux
5. therapist
6. chains
7. helios
8. every day
9. forgiveness
10. practical joke

11/23/23

November 23, 2023

Happy Thanksgiving!

I will be releasing a new song tomorrow for Black Friday, entitled "Chains"
It is off my solo album nightwalk but I don't usually include my singles on the albums so we'll see.

That project is coming out early next year, but my other project, AVG JOES, should be coming out in around a month!

Lots of exciting stuff happening, thank you Helsinki Finland for getting my song "Firebird" to 16,000 streams!

Stay tuned because we're just getting started.

There should be a single under AVG JOES coming out next week.

Title is TBD but we have so many good tracks it's hard to decide what to release.

Enjoy the new music :)

12/6/23

December 6, 2023

as this year comes to a close, i thought i would post another update to sum up what's happened & whats to come.

last friday, princeton & i dropped jokay, the debut single for our band AVG JOES.

you can find it under the audio page on this website!

two weeks ago i dropped chains, not sure if that will be on my album but that is coming out march 1st!

AVG JOES is coming out december 22nd but it might be a little late. we are working to the deadline.

my solo project will be more refined but don't sleep on AVG JOES it might be my favorite album rn.

i think me and princeyy bring out the best in each other and he's gotten me to record on beats that i would have never made and vice-versa. expect a fun, laid-back album full of jams to listen to with the homies on a cold winter day.

we might record a christmas song too but at the moment i got nothin i did get my camel mask in the mail though today, AVG JOES related business...

i just remembered that today's date is significant to the infelicities lore but it's too personal to share online.

just know that today is just one of those days for me, not in a bad way but in the sense that it's a date that i won't forget.

anyways check out pic related. it goes hard, right? that jacket was $88 dollars and worth every penny.

i just sequenced out another tracklist for the albums and it's different from the last one i post and will probably keep changing until the day it comes out so theres no point in posting another one.

but both albums should be longer than my last. i wouldn't put out anything that i think sucks so i favor quality over quantity.

other than the music things are going quite well. there should be a video for one of the AVG JOES songs coming out soon. stay posted. ending 2023 with a bang but 2024 is when shit gets real. more videos, live shows, everything that i dreamed of will become reality soon enough. i'm feeling incredibly optimistic and i can't wait to share it all with you.

-joe

12/21/23

December 21, 2023

the shortest day of the year...

also the release date of my band's new album, AVG JOES!

at 8:00 EST tonight there will be a livestream premiering all 12 songs on the tracklist this is what it is gonna sound like when it eventually releases on streaming, it's supposed to go up today but distrokid has been hit or miss when it comes to getting my music out on time. we also uploaded it yesterday so yeah.

this leads me into the topic of today's blog:

the pursuit of perfection

i didn't really put out as much content as i would have liked to this year. i've been steady making stuff, but more than half of what i've made has been scrapped. i get so anal about the details in my work that i won't release anything that isn't perfect. if i release something rough, it's part of the joke.

AVG JOES isn't perfect and that's okay.

we shot the video for the livestream twice, preferably i would have liked to have done it once so i could maintain the illusion that it's happening live but neither of the shoots went according to plan. i could have done it 10 times that night if i needed to but when you're working with other people you need to compromise. the album as a whole was rushed, like we recorded verses 20 minutes before we filmed the video. i noticed some background noise in one of the verses today and considered taking the whole album down because of it. i've done that before with my own music more than once but the last 3 releases were a bit more calculated. my next one i'm planning out 3+ months in advance. hoping to learn from all of this.

there is another side of the coin though. i remember watching some video about why south park only limits themselves to a week per episode, and they said it's because overthinking something can complicate it and after a while you begin to doubt your initial ideas in favor of newer ones. they are right, but i feel overthinking is part of my nature. i don't want to limit myself through words because i genuinely see it as more of a strength than an advantage. i have a clear vision of what i want something to be like and i thank god for granting me internal inspiration.

my new years resolution is to set more deadlines so i can plan my projects more accordingly. prince told me something similar. that's why i'm coining it as the AVG JOE mindset.

what have you accomplished today?

get it done, out the way jokay :)

January 9, 2024

happy (belated) new years!

it finally snowed where i live and theres another snowstorm outside now so i'm grateful for that.

i traveled to cuba recently, it's a place i've always wanted to go. for like every bs spanish research project i did where i had to pick a country it was always cuba. maybe i liked it because it was the edgy pick but to be fair you could say that about a lot of countries. either way the history of it always fascinated me and the fact it was a place i couldn't go to amplified my desires to visit.

overall, i liked the country, it was a genuinely beautiful place and if you're a brutalism connoisseur like i am theres plenty of that meshed with classic spanish architecture. there were also lots of old cars, maintained and driving on the road today. they have very little, but they make do with what they have. everything was good for the most part except for the food. i get that it's a communist country so i wasn't expecting the best but my whole family got food poisoning. if you ever go, don't eat anything raw. if you like chipotle then you'll love cuba.

anyways although i enjoyed the trip for the most part i find myself disliking traveling more and more as the years go by. i find myself stressing out more than enjoying myself and to me, i want to relax on a vacation because my day to day life is stressful enough. and like what do i even stress about. in the grand scheme of things they rarely ever matter but i get so racked up with guilt. i think about things i did years ago and cringe, guilt, mope, dwell, the whole spectrum of time sucking bullshit thoughts that don't benefit me whatsoever. and i get that there is like a healthy amount of guilt you should feel but i genuinely feel like a horrible person sometimes. too often. and like i'll tell someone and they're like "just apologize and move on" but then i do and i feel like i apologize too much. and then i think of all the shit other people did to me and get mad that they never apologized, so why should i? but i'm a better person than that. should i confront them though? no, it happened to long ago. god. listen to me ramble. shit like this plays in my head 24/7 it makes it hard to focus on anything or really put myself in the moment.

so back to the whole traveling thing, i feel like this whether i'm in other places or at home. when everyone around me is having a good time i don't want to bring them down with my bullshit problems. i've been shooting down requests from everyone to hang out so far this year, it's almost like i want to be this way? nah i just don't want to be an emo bitch around other people, i gotta be the cool version of myself that doesn't give a fuckkkkkkkk... but deep down, i do.

it's easier to be inside my comfort zone but i also know deep down that it's not right for me. but god i love that comfort zone. thinking back the last few years the only times i remember feeling bliss was either rotting in bed with a woman or by myself. preferably with a woman because at least i'm not alone but at the end of the day it's still just 2 people rotting. i feel like i've found a balance but whenever i think of what i really wanna do it's "wow i wish i was in bed right now."

the song of the day today has been this song called "sad vibes" that i made in february 2021, which is ironic because i consider that time one of the best times in my life. the bedrotting was the best part. during covid times i could spend the whole day in bed. and i thought that was sad. depending on your perspective, it still is. but you can't say i didn't try to put myself out there, i've explored the alternative and i'd still say that nothing feels as good as snuggling up with your partner or pets watching some bullshit on tv or playing vidya. i would do that all day every day for the rest of my life if i could.

i'd also make music sometimes but the drive to make music definitely comes from me doing shit i don't want to do. like coming back from this trip i've been so locked in on my new album and i think being there and having no way to work on it really brought that out of me. going back to the beginning of this entry, i wanted to go to cuba because it's a place i couldn't go to. i tend to want the things that i can't get, so if i strategically do things that suck then i'll want to make more content. weak men create strong times or some bullshit like that i don't know. anyways that's all for today. nightwalk coming soon. there are 20 tracks at the moment

one of my favorite song from my latest album speaking of albums, nightwalk is only a month away!

a lot of it is already finished but i still want to make new songs and improve the ones that are out it will drop on youtube first probably then be late like all my other releases but who cares it is done when it is done and i ultimately make music for myself, i just hope you like it too but if you want to listen to it check this website on march 1st i'll have somewhere you can listen to it i've been playing lots of fortnite and if you've been killed by/killed me you might have looked up my username which would be pretty cool because that's the reason why i made it that not because of fortnite, the first infelicities username was actually on tiktok but i deleted that account recently i had the police called on me for nightwalking. 3 cop cars showed up.

just the life of being a nightwalker stay safe in those streets

i'm in st. louis

you can probably guess what i'm doing...

and i am so fking excited to share it with you all on friday!

you might have noticed i changed a few things in the website's UI in preparation there is a new page dedicated to my album that you can reach by clicking on the album cover under "audio" or just go to infelicities.com/nightwalk/there is a countdown, a synopsis, and some pics that match the vibe.

i suggest when you listen to the album to go on a night walk yourself!

i haven't done this before but i think this album and my last album are gonna get a sequel.

above avg joes is in progress and theres a lot of tracks that didn't make the cut for the album i'm working on now as per usual. i might release a sister ep with those tracks, call it morning walk or something. morning dew. and the cover art is like super foggy but you can kind of see a guy with a lantern in the distance. i can hear it already. knowing me it will just turn into another album, like this one has been through many iterations that you can see in my blog posts since i dropped my last solo album, which i changed the name of post-release because the original name sucked. people would ask me what the album was called and i'd be like "uh, it's like loser, but the s and the v are interchangeable like..." i'm glad i changed it.

this album (nightwalk) is gonna be way better than the loser aesthetic.

nightwalk makes TLA look like a loser. it takes a doo doo diarrhea on pretty much every album i ever dropped, and i'm not just hyping it up, most people seem to have that same reaction when i preview it. they always say that though, but it feels different this time. if you don't like one track, just go to the next one, there should be something for you on this tape because i explore many different sounds.

i hope everyone tapped into my website taps into my album on friday. like i mentioned in my previous post, i don't know if it will reach streaming services by friday, but check infelicities.com, i will keep you posted. if all goes according to plan, i will upload it on wednesday, maybe even tomorrow night, as of now we are nearly done.

keep it squiggly

checking in...

i realized i haven't updated da blog since my album dropped... oops.... hope u guys liked it! reception has been pretty positive, i also dropped a companion EP with some of the songs sped up. i wanted to put those on the album as bonus tracks but i forgor on the homepage, you may have noticed the new shop icon. nothing is actually for sale yet but a shopify store is in the cards. i've always wanted to make merch and i used to make custom t-shirts on customink when i was younger.

as for my life lately, ya know, ups and downs, the world keeps turning. not much to say peace out

eclipse day ◯

can't believe they named an astronomical event after my car

i got to see it from a plane and it was breathtaking, one of those things that can't really be captured with a photo. more of a feeling. scenes reminiscent of thunderstorms, sunsets, and black holes. it was beautiful.

i made the move to finally block twitter and instagram on my phone. i don't really use instagram that much anymore but i developed a twitter habit where i would scroll through it pretty much any time i could. and i didn't even like what i was seeing, you see people that make you feel smart and people that make you feel stupid. my impact on the site was so minimal, i was posting a lot yet getting little feedback. and that little feedback means a lot, it's what kept me checking the site, but honestly, enough of that, i feel better without it already. it's crazy how many times i impulsively tried to check it then struggle to remember why i wanted to check it in the first place. i don't need that.

i have a vision for the world, one where artists aren't defined by class or competing with one another, working together to enrich our understanding of the human condition. i've learned so much from my friends that make stuff, and even if their art isn't my cup of tea i consider their approach and notice that they notice things that i don't, and vice-versa. i've never been much of a competitive person except in video games, so i relate to the feeling of wanting bigger numbers than the other guy, but if we all stopped worrying about that and worked together to lift each other up the world would be a more beautiful place.

BIG UPDATE!

you may have noticed that over the last 2 weeks i've drastically overhauled this website. in my last blog post i mentioned a vision i had for the world, and this is the manifestation of that dream. starting with new hampshire, i will be cataloging independent/underground artists in a directory that can be found on the homepage. once i reach ~64 artists, i will expand to other areas, starting with massachusetts, st. louis & wisconsin (madison/milwaukee). there have been some hiccups in the submission section, so apologies if you contacted me and i haven't added you. i created/tested a new page this morning that you can find at the bottom of the directory, so feel free to contact me there!

so why am i doing this? so far, infelicities.com has simply been a hub for my own personal projects and testimonials. working on this site is a passion project of it's own and i love updating little things here and there to keep visitors engaged. however, it's not about me anymore. i want to create something that will help people find each other and generate a more substantial community in atomized locations. i mentioned earlier this month that i was abstaining from social media, and this is my attempt at utilizing social media in a more intentional and pragmatic way. no distractions, just straight to the point. your name, what you do, and where i can find it.

reducing some of the people on the list to one type of art was difficult, as i'm somewhat of a "jack of all trades" myself, but i will change the title to whatever you like as long as it's concise. i also plan on putting up flyers around southern nh so i can get more people outside of my bubble that i've added through word of mouth. if this project is a success, i plan on updating the ui to be more similar to a wiki or archival site as well as incorporating paid options for increased exposure. i also like to imagine meet-up events in the future, such as concerts, conventions, markets and more. since i started the artist directory, traffic to infelicities.com has doubled, so i am hopeful for what's to come :)

this is a bit of a footnote but i also posted a new music video, "JOE MAMA" by AVG JOES. this video has been months in the making, i started it last summer and stopped working on it for a while but the other weekend me and the boys cut down some trees and got some pretty good footage so i added that to the edit. i also have been steadily working on the sequel to AVG JOES, ABV AVG JOES, which should be out sometime this summer. i've been making a lot of sample-heavy beats similar to "JOEVER" or that last track on /nightwalk/. it's too soon to post a tracklist or anything like that but expect a similar length to my last few projects. i will also be making a video advertising these recent updates on infelicities.com, along with the merchandise you can buy here. thanks for reading my blog! if you would like to subscribe for posts like this as well as future updates there is a checkbox to subscribe under the submission form. i've moved around a lot of stuff and changed how the website looks but everything that was there before will stay in some way, it's just taking the backseat to the artist directory which will be the primary purpose of this website moving forward.

candle making!

i post a lot about my other hobbies on this site, but i've never written about this one in particular.

this is something i do at least once a month, i burn them myself as well as give them out as gifts. this is something simple and rewarding that you can do in the background while you're working on something else, but it still requires attention (will elaborate later). all it requires is:

1. empty glass/metal jars; i've found that ones with the diameter of a toothpick work the best, in terms of burning evenly and giving enough room to light it once they burn down.

2. toothpick: you'll need one to hold up the wick while you are filling the basin with wax. like i mentioned, jars with that length are perfect for fitting your fat fingers in when they run low and you need to light that last bit.

3. candle wax: i recycle all my old candles, but i also use wax melts from dollar tree or walmart. the cheapest candles you can find are usually those tall white prayer candles, and while those don't have much of a scent i add essential oils to give it some flavor.

4. hemp wick; i've used many different kinds of wicks but i've found that this works the best. you can buy designated cotton wicks online but they're typically uniform in size, which doesn't work for the variety of glass jars i've collected. you can cut hemp wick into the size you need, and i've found that it burns slower than the alternatives. also weed lmao

5. pan/stove: this is where you make the candles. i recommend using a cheap pan or one you don't care about anymore because the wax is hard to remove once it dries. you will need to fill up the pan with water or the glass shatters from the heat of the pan. science rules so basically you're gonna fill up the pan with water, place your old candles in the basin to melt the wax, then set up your empty jars like the image above. i recommend pouring only a little bit in first and letting it solidify so the wick is anchored at the bottom. finally, you just wait for the wax to melt then fill those bad boys up to the top. voila, you have a candle!

so, why candles? i first picked up this hobby because my cat used to piss everywhere and my apartment stank. i got him neutered, so that problem was resolved but i also found that the candles i make also mask the smell of the dank shit i smoke, so i continued to make them. in a way, my candles tell a story because as soon as one is done, i melt it into the next one. the same way that you carry genes of your ancestors, there is a little bit of that first candle i made in every single one i produce.

i must issue a disclaimer, this can be dangerous if not done properly. i recommend staying in the kitchen while you're melting and consistently refilling the water in the pan. if not, this will happen. yes, that was me, and admittedly, i was playing fortnite and forgot i was making candles. luckily, i had renters insurance, but it was still traumatic, so don't be like me, don't leave something burning on the stove unattended. feels like that goes without saying but i had to learn it the hard way, if you let the water run out the glass will shatter, and the wax will catch fire.

i know that last part might be discouraging but it didn't stop me. i just learned my lesson, brushed off my shoulders and kept on truckin. the fact that i continue to do this is a testament of resilience, if i let that stop me i would have let a lot of other things stop me from living my life the way i should. at the end of the day, this is a fulfilling hobby and makes gift-giving easier once that time of year comes around. if you value patience, good smells and handmade craft then this might be for you too. thanks for reading :)

it's almost summertime, over a month has passed, that means it's time for an update!

2 years and one day ago i made the very first blog post on this website. it's been through many iterations since then, but for the most part the blog has stayed the same. i'm not really using it for personal stuff lately but the intention is definitely to establish an identity behind the website.

anyways, what's new? i moved again, and finally got my wifi working today so i'm getting back on the grind. i updated the artist list and have been working on abv avg joes with p, pictured is the very first avg joes cd. i intend to make more once this album is finished, and place those around with coordinates that will be listed on infelicities.com/joe later on.

i have been super interested in console homebrew lately, i got back into wii/u modding and i'm currently in the process of hacking my ps2. i just stopped writing this for a few minutes to buy myself a freemcboot memory card. living alone is expensive, but we makin that money, so we good. don't worry about me, i'm just gonna do what i'm gonna do, and we're just getting started.

anyways i'm gonna go get a haircut and a library card. thanks for reading, godspeed

ABV AVG JOES

the subsequent AVG JOES album will be available this friday this project has been in progress basically ever since we finished the last album, and it includes some deeper cuts from 2022. the theming seeks to answer the age-old question; what is a joe? this LP blends hip hop, reggae, funk, jazz, nu metal, soul, emo, hyperpop, and probably more that i'm forgetting about but it's a lot of genres, truly something for everyone. i hope you enjoy this project as much as prince and i enjoyed making it. here is the tracklist:

1. JOE ROGAN
2. O YA MON
3. DIRTY DAN
4. HOW 2 H8
5. ROLLIN ROUND (L TOWN)
6. IDC
7. FUNKY JOE
8. GREEK LIFE
9. HOW TO PRONOUNCE "JOE"
10. JOE ANTHEM
11. BELIEVE THE HYPE
12. ABV AVG
13. FOREVER SPLIFF_1

i deleted all social media so if you see this sharing it would go a long way. videos for some of the songs are in progress. i just had one of the best weeks in my life and i am genuinely grateful for the life i am living. one more s366 album

have an above average j

9/7/24

who is s366?

the answer is a bit more complicated than just "my stage name" which is the easy explanation. s366 is me, but i am not s366. s366 is a code, i chose the name because it sounded like a file extension or something you would punch in at the self checkout to buy produce. it sounded dystopian, imagining a world where everyone's names were reduced to a 4 digit code.

but why that letter and those numbers? i've had a lot of online pseudonyms over the years. sometime around fall 2016 i made an inst*gr*m account called

"s3e6a5n." it was my guv'mint name but with my last name turning into 365, meaning every day, daily. this went on for a bit, when i started posting music i posted it under the s3e6a5n name. i spent YEARS on my first project only to post it my first week of college without any of the verses i recorded because i didn't like how i sounded. i was also recording in audacity with stock plugins so there wasn't as much to work with. this one was called singles only, which was accompanied by other singles dropped weeks prior that i decided not to include in the album.

sometime in the next year i shortened it to s365, because saying the prior name out loud was too long. i made an ep over the summer in europe and released my first "real" project, every day on october first. i say first real project because that's the first one where i recorded my voice extensively. i was quite proud of it when it came out and still look back upon it fondly. i wanted to make it clear that i was just having fun and not taking it too seriously, but i was. i remember my roommate said i was addicted to making music. i got inspiration from general dissatisfaction with my life, i hated college, i lived in the laundry room of our apartment, and was going back and forth between periods of heavy drug use and sobriety. the name, every day is kind of a self title, because 365 means every day. i also imagined saying it in a frustrated manner, like "every day i gotta put up with this bullshit!" i remember like 3 days before i was supposed to post the album i had my laptop in my backpack walking to class, then it rained, laptop fried, and i got it repaired but had to delay the album. that's the kind of mood i was going for.

in early 2020 i changed my name to s366. my soundcloud was about to fill up, and i told myself that the next one i made would be called s366. i started to like that name more because i was born on a leap year and it rolled off the tongue better than 365. instead of making a new account, i purchased the soundcloud pro plan where i could have unlimited uploads and changed my name to s366, which it has remained for the last 4 years. the first project i released under that name was second winter, which took the foundation i laid in every day and amplified it with a cavalcade of features from my friends and even more distortion. it was intended to be a continuation of the themes in my first project, with the initial idea being them packaged together as a double album called "every day is second winter." eventually, time passed and i found myself in another chapter of my life so i published them as separate projects. my next album, music for the mental, was my first that i made in logic pro if you don't count cc:nh which was a group effort although i was the one hosting all the files and "mixing" it. i didn't really know what i was really doing but it helped me learn the ropes, and it was an easy transition as i made the last 2 projects on garageband. i released this project in summer 2020, what a time to be alive. i'll go on record saying that i had the time of my life during covid, and this album was a reflection of that. even though i posted it in june i ended up perfecting it until the end of august and have both versions available on my bandcamp. it was really a product of it's time, and hasn't aged as well as some of my other albums in my opinion. with that being said, it brings me back to that time, which may have sucked for you but it was great for me.

i released feedback in december of 2020, on the 366th day of the year. a few of the tracks i made while remastering the previous album but i wanted to focus more on making the verses good and relying less on features to carry the song. i wanted it to be much longer but i had the release date set for a while. once again, i changed a few things after the album released, but it was only a few days after the intial release date. t. roosevelt and imaginary friends are 2 of my favorite songs but the project is kind of all over the place so it's not my favorite. it's also the first time i collaborated with princeyy, who was added to the album last minute after it was initially released.

i didn't drop another full project until august of that year but i had released a few throwaways and gone through many iterations of what would become phoenix, the fourth/fifth s366 project. this one might be my favorite along with the latest album i released, it is just so consistent and came out of a very difficult time, like a phoenix rising from the ashes. it was also the first album i went to st. louis to master.

the next project i made, transparency, was released in march 2022. this album was intended to be more hopeful and lighthearted than the last, going back to not taking it that seriously. all of my albums have had sillier tracks but theres more upbeat ones than dark songs here, contrary to the previous few. this one is also kind of all over the place and while the intention was to be transparent, like hey, look at the real me, i don't think i really conveyed that.

two months later i released eating order with nebula, my first joint collab album we had been bouncing tracks between each other for a few years and one week while he visited me we finished up the album and posted it on my birthday, also the same day i graduated college. wow, time flies. i wouldn't release another album until the end of the year, but i had the cover in mind since before this. you might have noticed i haven't talked about the covers of my albums at all, i'm saving that for a future entry. this one is long enough.

so yeah anyways i released the loser aesthetic on my brothers birthday that year. it originally had a different, more cringeworthy title that i want to forget about. it was a careless jumble of words, slashes and parentheses, making saying the name out loud more painful than saying "s3e6a5n." the new title is the same idea but better. i see this album as a transition into singing more than rapping on my songs, which is the direction i'd like to go in.

i didn't release any albums under s366 for a whole year but princeyy and i made the first avg joes album during this time. i released /nightwalk/ on leap day this year, which you could also count as the 366th extra day. as i mentioned earlier, this is my favorite project thus far, and an improvement over the same formula that has been evolving over the last 5 years. this was originally intended to be the final s366 album, as was the previous (tla), but i think i got one more in me. i wouldn't stop creating, i just think i have outgrown this name. just like the name of this website, people get confused when they hear it. it's not as memorable as a one syllable name that people describe as "easy to remember." but i like it that way, as my nature is to hang on the fringes of society, and with a name like that it's where i remain.

i don't want to keep shooting myself in the foot though. i like the name infelicities, and have considered shortening it to "infel," but people say it sounds like incel or infidel, which again, puts me on the fringes of society but with a more extremist angle which is kind of cool if you're fucked in the head. whatever it may be, i will never stop making things. art is what makes life worth living and music brings memories back better than a picture can sometimes. i hope you enjoyed this lengthy biography about my bullshit life hope it provides some insight and have a nice day!

nothing i mean nothing. i might get together with friends once a week but i'm currently not reading anything, not playing anything, not watching any series, i am just in this state of purgatory, mindlessly consuming slop every waking moment. i know i sound pessimistic but there is nothing to garnish about this, it's sad.

i've attempted to improve this website in many ways over the past year. first there was the store, which got a couple sales, but flatlined so i closed it for the time being. maybe i'll bring it back, maybe i won't, who knows. i also started the nh artist directory, had a few people sign up, put some flyers around, and made business cards. maybe these ventures would've been successful if i advertised them online, but i have this aversion to buying ads, i personally avoid them like the plague so idk how well it would work, especially for a free service like the directory.

i've recommended the directory to every artist i've come across in the last 7-8 months, and nobody signs up. i don't exactly blame them, like heres this guy that pays for this shitty url that nobody knows how to spell asking me to be a part of his little art club, what's the catch? literally nothing but that's what you have to gain as well. at this point it's still in it's infancy, i still believe that theres a valid need for networking without the smoke and mirrors of social media.

i'm not throwing in the towel but i'm definitely reevaluating things, like what am i even doing here? i'm turning 25 next year, this is not the person i thought i would be at this age. feels like i should have my shit together by now but i don't. i recently got certified to be a teacher and like... i don't want to do that shit, i want to be a rockstar, who doesn't? before now, it was like i'm just doing whatever i'm doing until i blow up then it's smooth sailing from there, and i've accepted that will likely never happen. that's life, you don't always get what you want, and that's ok.

my new years resolutions are to cut my screentime in half, read more books and make After the Sun Sets as good as possible. as i have mentioned before, this will be the final s366 album. only time will tell what comes next but i will be retiring the name, it's time to move on. i think 2025 will bring many surprises and i'm looking forward to what's on the horizon. thanks for reading, i know this was a bit more venty than usual but i am not upset, just reflecting on this year and what's to come. take care infelicifriends, have a very merry christmas.

i got a nose job

well not really, i just had a deviated septum corrected, but i like telling people it's a nose job. i'll be out of commission for the next week until they take all this bullshit out my nose, but i'm just hoping it's worth it because i've never been able to breathe properly.

anyways besides that recent development things have been pretty good! i know my last update was a bit negative but that's not the energy i want to bring into this year or today's entry. i've gotten back into making music, i've just made my catchiest song ever for my upcoming solo endeavor, after the sun sets. if you would like to learn more about this project visit /atss or click on the album cover under /audio. disc 2 is already uploaded - disc one will be updated as songs are completed.

i am also pleased to announce that AVG JOES will return in 2025 with a project called Average Joseph. it's not as far along as my solo album so don't expect it anytime soon. i'm hoping to drop atss around springtime and aj in the summer/fall. both should have around 10 new tracks.

i have a lot of things planned for this great year of 2025 and can't wait to share with you how things unravel as time progresses. my brain is fully developed now, i'm done messing around, i mean business.

this is my last blog post...

for now. for nearly 4 years i have hosted this website through godaddy's website builder, the same site that i used to purchase the domain. while it was a great service for beginners, i've found that it has continuously limited my creativity and put a ceiling on the heights this site could reach. when it came time to renew it this year, i could not justify the price for the caliber of service they provide. you would think if you payed that kind of sum you could implement gif files, wav files, photos in full quality, return accurate statistics and turn off that damn cookies warning. i have made the decision to switch to a new provider, and i am currently weighing my options. i hope to have the new website up by the time my album drops, which will be sometime in april. i will be archiving all my blog posts and every page on this site before armageddon on the 20th. i'm sure it will look different when this place returns but i still plan on using it for the same purposes. i will keep blogging, continue beep boopin on the keyboard and making photos/videos. i'd like to bring back the store at some point too. the artist directory will be no more, it was a fun experiment but it's an idea i'll just return to later once other bases in my field are covered. you won, zuck. elon. but i didn't hear no bell.

this is a particular interesting juncture in my life as it seems like another transitory period, like i'm a caterpillar that entered it's chrysalis before it blooms into a butterfly. i would be a moth though. anyways, we got the website changing, my name changing (s366 -> infel), a "last album," and generally entering into new stages of life with my job, relationship, and creative process. i've mentioned before that i'm turning 25 this year, and see it as a milestone; they say that's when your brain is fully developed. i've learned a lot over these past 5 years and a lot of it was just trial and error, seeing what sticks. i guess i've focused on a clearer picture of what i want and what i need to do, and what's important while finding a balance between the two.

shit, i gotta return my library book. even chewing that one to the wire so i guess is goodbye, but also a see you later. thank you to everyone that has ever taken the time to explore this domain, i hope you enjoyed your experience. special thanks to the 5 subscribers that will receive this email, love you guys. like a phoenix, i will return from the ashes better than ever. so long, infelicifriends...
